September 7, 2012	MDA #117	VOLUME 37	No. 36	PUB. Weekly
WEEKLY GRAIN	COMMENTARY	Kevin McNew	Adjunct Profess	or, UMD-College Park

Markets Gearing Up for September Reports

The trade was driven early on by the European Central Bank's announcement of a bond buying program to ease the debt obligations of Portugal, Spain, Greece and Italy. The outside markets reacted positively to this announcement with stocks trading over 1.5% higher. Crude oil was up sharply only to end in the red. The dollar index is off slightly after the announcement. This lent some support to the grains as the pit session opened up. However, supply and demand is still on most traders' minds

On the demand side, we saw wheat export sales of about 475,000 MT to Egypt lost to Russia, Romania and Ukraine today. Domestic wheat prices are overpriced on the world market for now, but there has been a lot of chatter about exports being voluntarily limited by Ukraine later this year. There is also talk of the possibility of Russian exports being restricted. We haven't seen anything concrete from either country, but these limitations will have to be monitored as we move forward.

The Energy Information Administration released its ethanol report for the week ending Aug. 31st. Ethanol production was reported as 829,000 barrels per day, which is up 1.2% this week but down 7.5% from last year. Ethanol stocks increased 238,000 barrels, which is an increase of 1.3% from last week and 9.7% above last year at this time. Total corn used for ethanol in the last marketing year fell just shy of the USDA's estimate of 5 billion bushels by 40 million bushels.

A couple of private estimates came out recently with their final yield estimates of about 121 and 120 for corn and 36.7 and 36 for soybeans. Their corn estimates are a couple bushels below the current USDA estimate of 123.4, but the bean estimates are on par with the USDA's 36.1. The trend of the private estimates has been for corn to be lower by a couple of bushels and beans roughly the same. We'll get the USDA's updated production estimates next Wednesday. Included in the USDA's estimates will be revisions to world production. We already see some early indications that world production should increase as Brazil is expected to plant a record soybean crop. More recently the Buenos Aires Grains Exchange projects corn plantings in Argentina to increase 300,000 hectares from previous estimates to about 3.4 million hectares.

Traders will be focusing on next week's USDA Supply/Demand and Crop Production reports towards the end of this week and into the beginning of next week
